Focus on Biblical Prophecy

We may consider the words which I have just now cited, as comparing Prophecy to a faint light shining in a dark place; by the help of which, objects that are near may be seen distinctly enough; while those at a distance are still but obscure and confused.—But I cannot but think it much better to consider our apostle as advising us to take such heed unto prophecy, as we would take unto a light afforded us, lost and bewildered in a place of darkness.

Acquisitions Report for FY 2017—2018, 1st and 2nd quarters

Our acquisition efforts during this first half of fiscal year 2017-2018, have focused on Biblical Prophecy. Taking the bibliographies created by comparing our current holdings against L. E. Froom's 4-volume work The Prophetic Faith of Our Fathers, and searching the authors and titles we don't have against what booksellers both here and abroad are offering, we have located and acquired nineteen works to date. Of the nineteen, only four are not found in Froom. With the remaining fifteen works, the authors of five of the titles are discussed by Froom, but not these specific titles. Since the preparation of this report, several additional volumes have been located and ordered. If they arrive in time, they will be added. If not, they will be at the top of the list in the next report!

I learned an interesting tidbit about one of the booksellers from whom we have acquired several works—he has actually read Froom! I noticed in his description of the most recent book acquired that he stated “cited by Froom...” First time I had come across such in a bookseller's description. I commented on this to him which is when he told me that he actually enjoyed reading Froom and has sold four sets over the years, always keeping the scruffiest set for the shop. I have also located a bookseller up in Winnipeg that has a focus in Icelandic literature, and had amongst his holdings several Ellen G. White titles in Icelandic, along with a John Gottlieb Matteson title in Icelandic. You never know what you are going to find!

We did acquire one work, so far, that falls outside the Biblical Prophecy category, that being a work by William Andrus Alcott that joins the thirty-three other works by Alcott on diet & health to be found in within the holdings of the Heritage Research Center.

With seven months yet to go in this current fiscal year, we have every expectation that we will continue to find important works that build on the tremendous foundation to be found in the areas of Seventh-day Adventist history, diet, and Biblical prophecy.

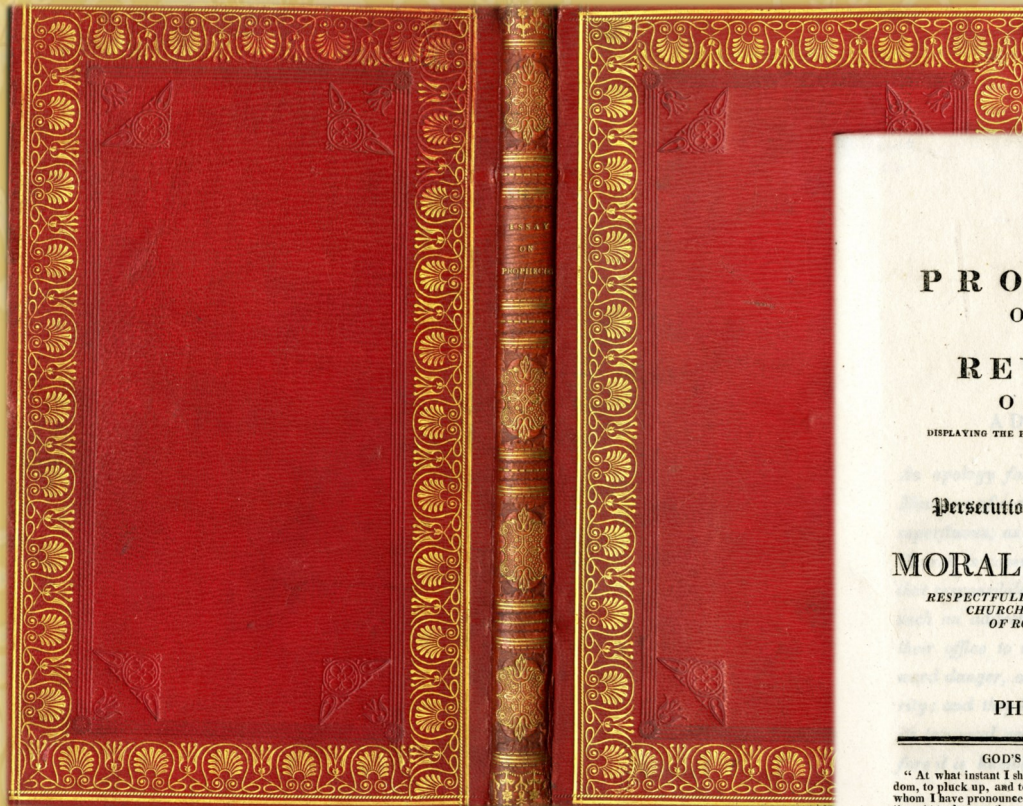

Respectfully submitted,

TIME. As to ascertain the meaning of the different terms of time, in the symbolic language, is of very great importance, the more attention is due to it. Mr. Daubuz and Dr. Lancaster have brought forward a great deal of very important matter on this subject, which throws much light on it; and which should be well considered by those who would understand those prophecies in which terms of time are mentioned, and numbers given.* "Days, months and years, says Artemidorus, have not always their proper signification, for months are sometimes denoted by years, and days too, and years and days by months, and months and years by days. But that this may not become doubtful; when years are mentioned, if they be proportionable and suitable, they may be accounted as years; if over many, as days; the same rule reciprocally for days; if less as months, let them be taken according to the present occasion." From these words it appears that in the symbolical language, the aforesaid terms of time are symbolical; and that the said terms, are, in the same language, synonymous, as they are also in the oriental languages.

General PREFACE

TO THE

Minor PROPHETS.

THE twelve Minor Prophets were always comprised in one Book, called the Book of the Prophets, by St. Stephen, Acts vii. 42. and the Book of the twelve Prophets by St. Cyprian, Epist. 59. The Son of Syrach speaks of them under one and the same Character, *Ecclus. xlix. 10. Now, that such an unanimity of sentiment has existed, may be inferred from the most indisputable facts.—Not only did the first reformers of the Protestant Churches, both at home and abroad, agree in referring the leading prophecies concerning Antichrist to Papal Rome, but to their authority we may add that of a host of later writers, among whom may be named, Sir Isaac, and Bishop Newton, the illustrious Mede, the learned Vitringa, Dr. Henry More, Brightman, Owen, Daubuz, Mr. Lowth, &c.—These eminent men, whatever variation of opinion may have obtained among them in the minuter parts of the great scheme of Scripture prophecy, would have united in rejecting as unscriptural and dangerous the idea of its being even possible that Papal Rome should become a great Christian episcopacy, or in any sense whatever an instrument of building up the Church of

A great Part of the Wisdom of the Eastern Nations was wrapped up in Hieroglyphical Emblems and Numbers. The Symbols of Pythagoras are a remarkable Instance of this sort of Ancient Learning. This Method God hath thought fit to make use of to discover some Mysterious Truths in his Word: Such as perhaps he thinks not convenient to be more clearly revealed till its proper Time and Season: Intending by such obscure Hints to encourage Men's Searching into the more abstruse Parts of the Scriptures, and to shew that all Human Knowledge may be made Subservient to Divine.

Ethan Smith (1762-1849) was born in Massachusetts, and in 1780 joined the American Army. Returning home, he was converted and joined the church in 1781, establishing prayer meetings in his home. Encouraged to study for the ministry, he went to college. After graduation from Dartmouth in 1790, and a special period of theological study, he served as Congregational-Presbyterian pastor at Hopkinton, New Hampshire, Hebron, New York, Poultney, Vermont, and Hanover, Massachusetts. His last responsibility was as city missionary in Boston.

Froom states that Smith wrote three books on prophecy—A Dissertation on the Prophecies (1811), Key to the Prophecies (1814), and Key to the Revelation in Thirty-Six Lectures (1833) and—in Thirty-Eight Lectures (1837). Froom also fails to mention A Key to the Figurative Language Found in the Sacred Scriptures (1814), View of the Hebrews (1823), and finally Prophetic Catechism: to Lead to the Study of the Prophetic Scriptures (1839).

As expected, this work views the Mormons, or The Church of the Latter-Day Saints, in light of the prophecies. In my brief examination of the discussion of the dream of Nebuchadnezzar and the vision of Daniel, I found the curious statement shown here regarding Babylon, Nebuchadnezzar and the Czar of Russia.

the four great monarchies mentioned by Daniel, and corroborated, historically, as the great image seen by Nebuchadnezzar. Russia is Babylon and Czar is a part of the head or great king Nebuchadnezzar. By putting a C before the last syllable we have a part of the head of Babylon, viz., Czar. Persia is represented as silver, next in value to gold. It seemed once that Persia would never decay, but it has dwindled to a little mon-

This work by William Andrus Alcott, president and founder of the American Vegetarian Society, is both a cookbook and a treatise on the vegetarian diet.

In addition to the discussion of the woman's role as housekeeper, The Young House-Keeper provides recipes for simple vegetarian meals from chapters such as "The Apple", "The Pear", and "The Cucumber." The work was very popular, going through at least twenty editions by 1851.

This particular copy of the Young House-Keeper once belonged to Charles R. MacIvor—his signature and blindstamp shown above. MacIvor who worked at the Battle Creek Food Company with John Harvey Kellogg from 1929 to 1939, and was considered a personal friend. MacIvor's unfinished biography of Kellogg — The Lord's Physician — resides within the Charles MacIvor [sic] Collection, the Center for Adventist Research, Andrews University.

Importance of the potatoe as an article of diet. Modes of cooking it—boiling, baking, steaming and roasting. Bad boiling. Examples of a better mode. Cooking a potatoe well, seldom understood. The "civic crown." Mashed potatoes. Potatoe bread. Potatoes and milk. Potatoe soup. "Hash." Fried potatoes. The potatoe sometimes poisonous.

Too much importance can hardly be attached to an article which forms the principal support of many millions, and the partial support of a still larger number. I believe most of the civilized countries of Europe use this valuable root more ~ less freely—and that it is daily gaining favor.

SWEET APPLE PUDDING.—One pint of scalding milk, half a pint of Indian meal, six sweet apples, cut in small pieces; add a little salt, and bake it three hours.
